

Lamiaceae

Clerodendrum floribundum

lolly bush

Tyler M Wilce iNat

ALA Local Natives

Ann Moran
Field Botanist

Greg Tasney iNat

ETYMOLOGY

(clear-o-DEN-drum) Greek cleros = chance = dendrom = tree; refers to variable medicinal properties; The species floribundum = free flowering.

LIFEFORM

Tree 3-6 m x 3 m Spread

STATUS

Well conserved; low population size; Recorded at 1122 Locations

OCCURS

Cape York, N Qld to Nimbin NSW, Howard Springs NT, Balgo WA (NG)

HABITAT

Dry/Subtropical Rainforest, Semi-evergreen Araucarian Microphyll/Notophyll Vineforest

LEAVES

Opposite, 6-20 cm, oval-lanceolate, tapping at the tips on black 1-6 cm stalks;

FLOWERS

Tubular, 3 cm, white to cream, scented dioecious in terminal clustered panicle

Flowering Times Sept, Oct

FRUIT

Drupes, 1 cm, shiny purplish-black are nestled in persistent red 5 lobed fleshy calyx.

Fruiting Times June, July, Aug, Sept, Oct, Nov, Dec, Jan, Feb, March

BARK

Brown smooth or finely & softly scaly

TRUNK or STEM

Bushy tree with slightly flanged or irregular trunk; often suckers freely,

ETHNOBOTANY

Timber wood yellowish brown close grain medium soft easy to work.

WILDLIFE

Scented flowers attract Ornithoptera richmondia Richmond Birdwing (adult)

INSECTS

Coenotes eremophileae Hawk Moth Clerodendri Matsumura Aphid

BIRD

Green Catbird, Satin Bowerbird, Emerald Dove, Brown Pigeon, Rose-crowned Fruit-dove (fr)

BUTTERFLY

Hypolycena phorbas Black-Spotted Flash), Hypochrysops ignitus Fiery Jewel

INDIGENOUS USES

Decoction made from the wood & drunk to relieve aches, pains and gastro-intestinal disorders. Cooked roots eaten in hard times fruit eaten by Aborigines. Water indicator, fire sticks made from dried sticks

ID FEATURES

Crushed smells like cigarettes. Pressed and dries black